Escape Day Steps

Steps:

The Day Before

- ✓ To give kids maximum time on the escape, it's helpful to put them in groups a day ahead of time.

Escape Day

- ✓ Set up each group by placing desks together with their group folder on the "table."
- ✓ Have the other tasks copied and set up in left to right order. See image below. Have the answer sheet ready.

Instructions to Students

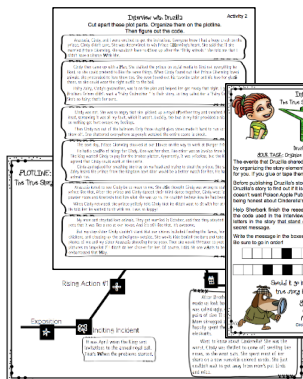

SAY:

- Everything you need to get started is in the folder.
- Designate one person from each group to report answers to me.

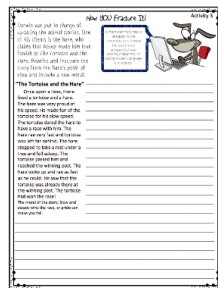

Instructions for Teacher

- ✓ Kids must read everything carefully in order to complete the tasks.
- ✓ As groups come to you for answer checks, give them their next activity pages (if the last challenge is correct). Go from left to right. Also, hand out one of the final plot line puzzles at the end of each task completion, making sure all 7 have been handed out by the time they finish the 4 tasks. You will hand out the last 4 plot line puzzle pages after the last task has been completed. They can be handed out in any order.
- ✓ After groups finish the Escape, hand out the exit slips and the awards.
- ✓ If time allows, debrief the Escape challenge. Exit slips are great for leading the debriefing.

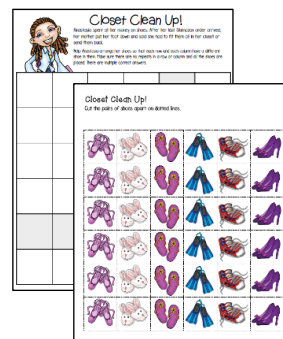

Lay out the activity pages in order. When students come to you with an answer you will hand out the next task & one of the final puzzle pages.

Activity 2: Interview with Druzilla

☆ Exposition: A W

My mom and stepdad love animals. They got married in October, and then they adopted so many pets that it was like a zoo at our house. And it's still like that. It's awesome.

But my step-sister Cindy couldn't stand that our chores included feeding the llamas, horses, and chickens, and cleaning up the animal poop outside. She would hide behind the barn and take awful photos of me and my sister Anastasia shoveling horse poop. Then she would threaten to post the ugly pictures on Snapchat if I didn't do her chores for her. Of course, I did. No one wants to be embarrassed that way.

🦋 Inciting Incident: W

It was April when the King sent invitations to the annual royal ball. That's when the problems started.

✂ Rising Action 1: H C W

Anastasia, Cindy, and I were excited to get the invitations. Everyone knew I had a huge crush on the prince. Cindy didn't care. She was determined to win Prince Charming's heart. She said that if she married Prince Charming, she wouldn't have to clean up after the "filthy animals." She told me that I didn't have a chance with him.

△ Rising Action 2: P S

Cindy then came up with a plan. She stalked the prince on social media to find out everything he liked, so she could pretend to like the same things. When Cindy found out that Prince Charming loved animals, she pretended to love them too. She even found out his favorite color and his love for glass shoes, so she could wear the right outfit to the ball.

Hairy Zairy, Cindy's godmother, was in on the plan and helped her get ready that night. I guess the Grimm Brothers didn't want a "Hairy Godmother" in their story, so they called her a "Fairy Godmother." She's no fairy; that's for sure.

🌀 Rising Action 3: S

Anastasia hated to see Cindy be so mean to me. She also thought Cindy was wrong to stalk the prince like that. After the prince and Cindy danced their third dance together, Cindy went into the powder room and Anastasia told him what she was up to. He couldn't believe how he had been duped.

When Cindy returned, the prince politely told Cindy that he didn't want to sit with her at the table. He told her he wanted to sit with me. I was so happy!

◇ Climax: P

Cindy was not. She was so angry that she picked up a royal appetizer tray and smashed it over my head, screaming it was all my fault, which it wasn't. Luckily, the bun in my hair provided a nice cushion, so nothing got hurt except my feelings.

Then Cindy ran out of the ballroom. Only those stupid glass shoes made it hard to run so she kicked them off. One shattered everywhere as people watched the entire scene in shock.

🌀 Falling Action: H P

The next day, Prince Charming stopped at our house on the way to work at Burger Prince.

He had a couple of things for Cindy. One was her shoe. The other was an invoice from his dad. The king wanted Cindy to pay for the broken platter. Apparently, it was priceless, but the king agreed that Cindy could work at the castle.

Cindy apologized for smashing the tray on my head and trying to steal the prince. She said Hairy Zairy heard the prince from the kingdom next door would be a better match for her. He hates animals too.

🎁 Resolution: C

After Grimy Brothers released the story that made us look bad, Anastasia quickly forgot that she was called ugly. All she cared about were the 100 pairs of size 11 shoes she bought on Glamazon. Mom shrugged off being called wicked and happily spent the money to buy food for her elephants.

Want to know about Cinderella? She was the worst. Cindy was thrilled to come off smelling like roses, so she went nuts. She spent most of her share on a new pumpkin colored condo. She just couldn't wait to get away from mom's pet birds and mice.

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs

by the Brothers Grimm

Once upon a time in a great castle, a king's daughter grew up happy and contented, in spite of a jealous stepmother. She was very pretty, with blue eyes and long black hair. Her skin was delicate and smooth, and so she was called Snow White. Everyone was quite sure she would become very beautiful. Though her stepmother was a wicked woman, she too was very beautiful, and the magic mirror told her this every day, whenever she asked it.

MIRROR, MIRROR
on the wall...

"Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is the loveliest of them all?" The reply was always; "You are, your Majesty," until the dreadful day when she heard it say, "Snow White is the loveliest." The stepmother was furious and-- wild with jealousy-- began plotting to get rid of her rival. Calling one of her trusty servants, she bribed him with a rich reward. She instructed him to knock Snow White unconscious and then take her deep into the forest so she would be lost forever. He did as he was told. Snow White woke up all alone in the forest.

Night came, but the servant did not return. Snow White, alone in the dark forest, began to cry bitterly. She thought she could feel terrible eyes spying on her, and she heard strange sounds and rustlings that made her heart thump. At last, overcome by tiredness, she fell asleep curled under a tree.

Snow White slept fitfully, waking from time to time with a start and staring into the darkness round her. Several times, she thought she felt something touch her as she slept.

Dawn woke the forest to the song of the birds, and Snow White too, awoke. A whole world was stirring to life and the little girl was glad to see how silly her fears had been. However, the thick trees were like a wall round her, and as she tried to find out where she was, she came upon a path. She walked along it and soon came to a clearing. There stood a strange cottage, with a tiny door and tiny windows. Snow White pushed the door open.

"I wonder who lives here?" she said to herself, peeping round the kitchen. "What tiny plates! And spoons! There must be seven of them, the table's laid for seven people." Upstairs was a bedroom with seven neat little beds. Going back to the kitchen, Snow White had an idea.

"I'll make them something to eat. When they come home, they'll be glad to find a meal ready." Towards dusk, seven tiny men marched homewards singing. But when they opened the door, to their surprise they found a bowl of hot steaming soup on the table, and the whole house spick and span. Upstairs was Snow White, fast asleep on one of the beds. The chief dwarf prodded her gently.

"Who are you?" he asked. Snow White told them her sad story, and tears sprang to the dwarfs' eyes. Then one of them said, as he noisily blew his nose:

"Stay here with us! You can live here and tend to the house while we're down the mine. Don't worry about your stepmother leaving you in the forest. We love you and we'll take care of you!" Snow White gratefully accepted their hospitality, and next morning the dwarfs set off for work. But they warned Snow White not to open the door to strangers.

Meanwhile, back at the castle, the evil stepmother turned to the magic mirror, certain she would again be the fairest in the land. But her hopes were dashed, for the mirror replied: "The loveliest in the land is still Snow White, who lives in the seven dwarfs' cottage, down in the forest." The stepmother was beside herself with rage.

"She must die! She must die!" she screamed. Disguising herself as an old peasant woman, she put a poisoned apple with the others in her basket. Then, taking the quickest way into the forest, she crossed the swamp at the edge of the trees. She reached the bank unseen, just as Snow White stood waving goodbye to the seven dwarfs on their way to the mine.

Snow White was in the kitchen when she heard the sound at the door: KNOCK! KNOCK!

"Who's there?" she called suspiciously, remembering the dwarfs' advice.

"I'm an old peasant woman selling apples," came the reply.

"I don't need any apples, thank you," she replied.

"But they are beautiful apples and ever so juicy!" said the velvety voice from outside the door.

"I'm not supposed to open the door to anyone," said Snow White, who was reluctant to disobey her friends.

"And as a reward for being good, I'm going to make you a gift of one of my apples!" Without a further thought, Snow White opened the door just a tiny crack, to take the apple.

"There! Now isn't that a nice apple?" Snow White bit into the fruit, and the poisoned apple lodged in her throat. She fell to the ground.

Now chuckling evilly, the wicked stepmother hurried off. But as she ran back across the swamp, she tripped and fell into the quicksand. No one heard her cries for help; she disappeared without a trace.

Meanwhile, the dwarfs came out of the mine to find the sky had grown dark and stormy. Loud thunder echoed through the valleys and streaks of lightning ripped the sky. Worried about Snow White, they ran as quickly as they could down the mountain to the cottage.

There they found Snow White, lying still and lifeless, the poisoned apple by her side. They did their best to bring her around, but it was no use. They did not know that the piece of poisoned apple was lodged in her throat.

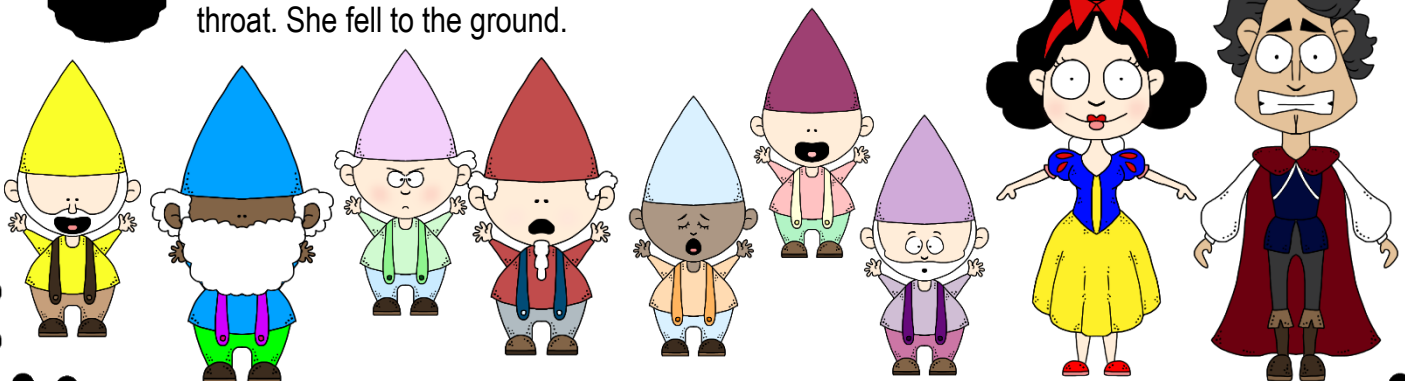

The little men wept and wept for a long time. Then they laid Snow White on a bed of rose petals, carried her into the forest, and put her in a crystal coffin. Each day they laid a flower there.

Then one evening, they discovered a strange young man admiring Snow White's lovely face through the glass. After listening to the story, the Prince (for he was a prince!) made a suggestion.

"If you allow me to take her to the Castle, I'll call in famous doctors to waken her from this peculiar sleep." The dwarfs agreed that the prince's plan sounded promising.

As they helped the prince place her in a carriage, the movement dislodged the poisoned apple from her throat and Snow White woke up from the enchanted sleep. She had amazingly come back to life!

Eventually, Prince Florian and Snow White fell in love and got married and moved into the grand castle. The dwarfs were frequent guests, and they all lived happily ever after.

Fun Fact: If they don't read the regular version (aka 'Snowy'),

I'm sure you're familiar with the Grimm brothers' completely fabricated tale, Snow White & the 7 Dwarfs.

Well, they got it ALL wrong!

We've been hounding Poison Apple Publishing for months to set the record straight and publish all of our stories the way they actually happened.

Finally, they agreed on one condition: we had to have everyone's stories ready to print in 24 hours! Otherwise, they'd run the same versions they've been running for years.

AS YOU LOOK AROUND THE ROOM, YOU SEE PAPERS SCATTERED EVERYWHERE.

YOU & YOUR FRIENDS ARE HOPING THEY DON'T EXPECT YOU TO ORGANIZE THIS MESS. YOU CAN BARELY KEEP YOURSELVES ORGANIZED!

For months, we've been collecting everyone's stories. We were just about finished when Mom remembered a couple of errands she had to run. I said I'd go with her & promised the dawgs a game of catch when we returned.

I made the mistake of not closing off this room so the dawgs had the run of our entire office. We returned to find them having a grand old time running from room to room.

Thank goodness Mom remembered her good friend, your amazing teacher, had offered to help if we ever needed it.

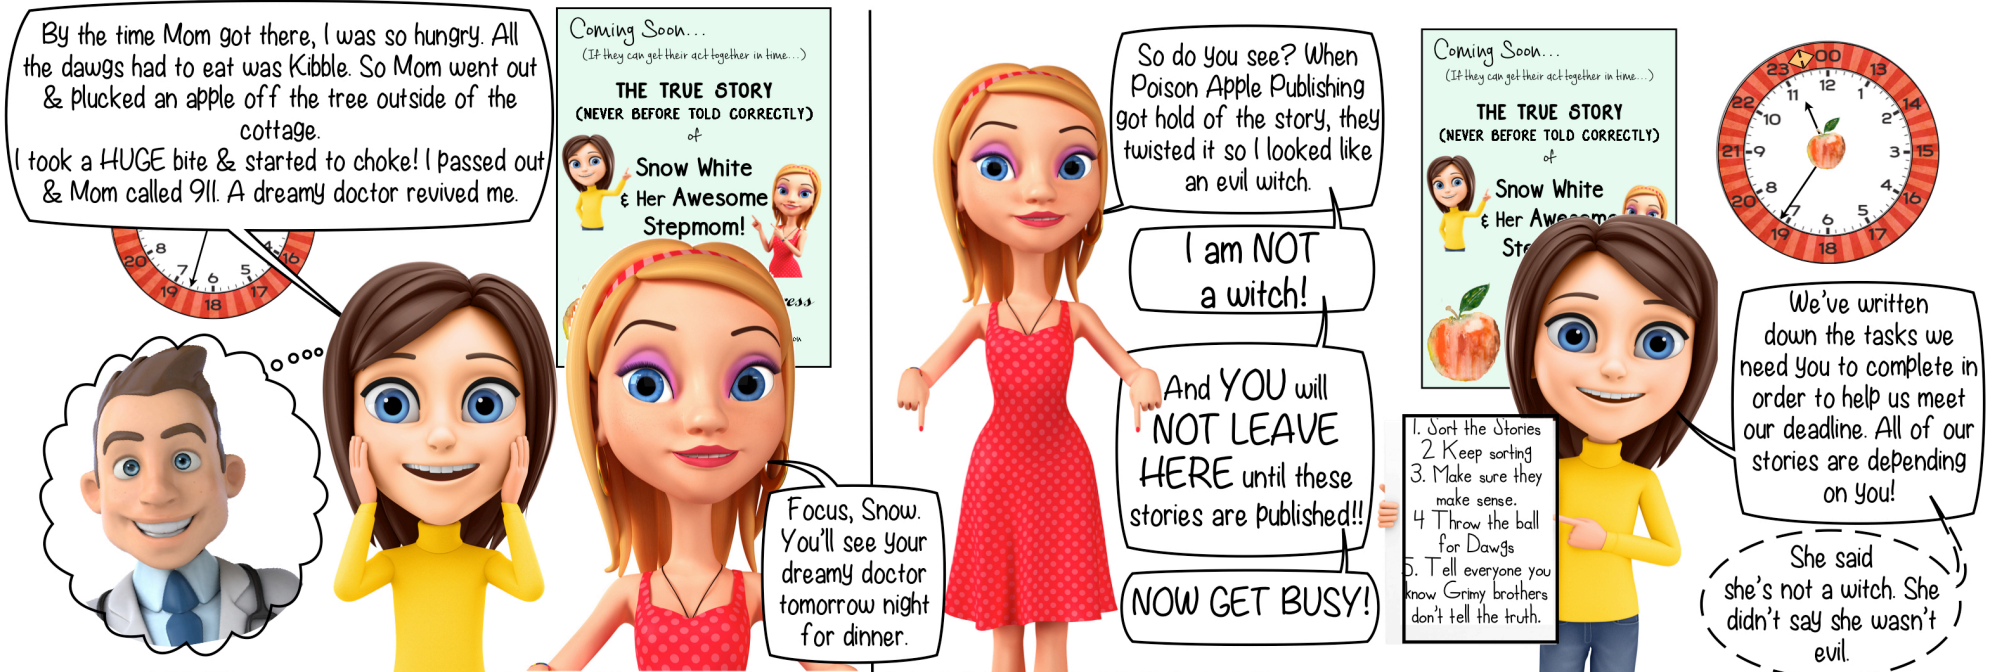

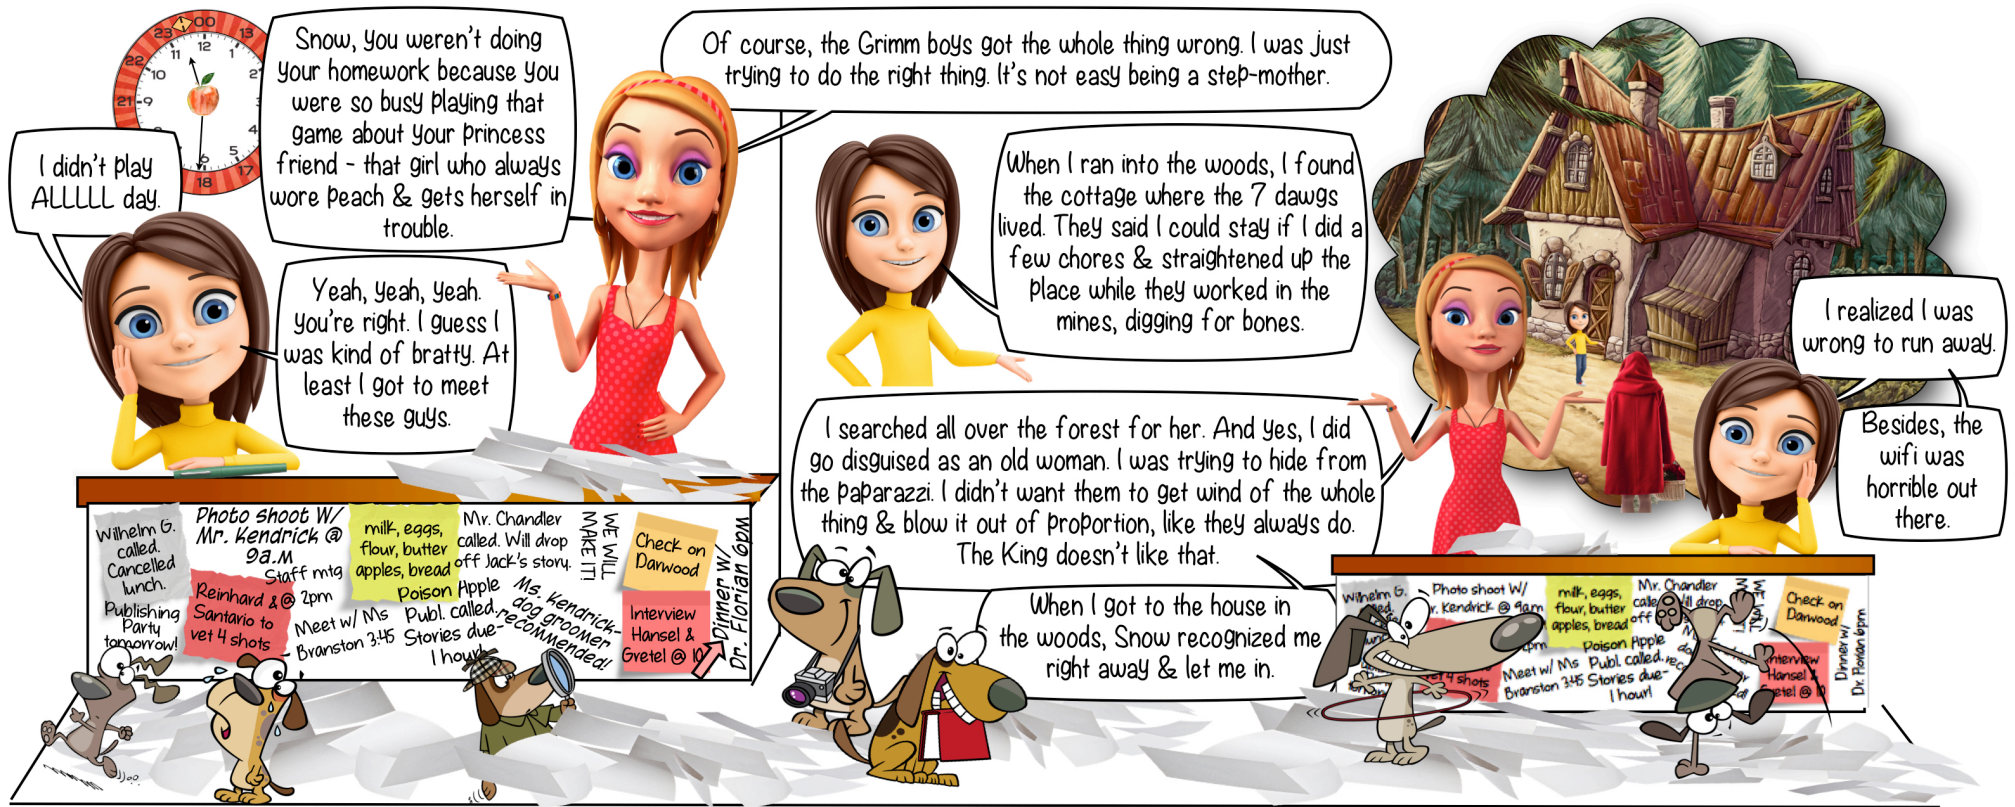

We've already used 23 hours and don't have a lot of time left, so grab a pile and let's get started!

We were too stunned to speak. All our hard work, all of our interviews - scattered into disorganized piles of mishmash around the room.

YOU PICK UP THE NEAREST STACK OF PAPERS AND BEGIN TO READ ALOUD...

Interview with Druzilla

Activity 2

The True Story of Cinderella...or is it?

I warned the whole family that if we sold our story to the Brothers Grimm they would sensationalize it beyond recognition. Did they listen to me? Nope. All this family cared about was the money the brothers paid them. They didn't care how much the true story was distorted.

Druzilla's Interview is a Mess!

YOUR TASK: Organize it AND find out if it is the TRUTH or a LIE.

The events that Druzilla shared in her interview are a disorganized mess! Begin by organizing the story elements in order on the plotline. Two have been done for you. If you glue or tape them in place, DO NOT cover the symbols.

Before publishing Druzilla's story, Marion had Sherbark Holmes investigate Druzilla's story to find out if it is true. Like any responsible publisher, Marion doesn't want Poison Apple Publishing to publish the interview if Druzilla is not being honest about Cinderella's story.

Help Sherbark finish the research. Use your best detective skills to figure out the code used in the interview. Match the symbol for each story part with the letters in the story that stand out in some way. Use the code grid to find the secret message.

Write the message in the boxes.
Be sure to go in order!

A fractured fairy tale is designed to be humorous by changing the story in an unexpected way; altering characters, or adding modern language and events.

Once upon a time, there lived a tortoise and a hare. The hare was very proud of his speed. He made fun of the tortoise for his slow speed. The tortoise dared the hare to have a race with him. The hare ran very fast and tortoise was left far behind. The hare stopped to take a rest under a tree and fell asleep. The tortoise passed him and reached the winning post. The hare woke up and ran as fast as he could. He saw that the tortoise was already there at the winning post. The tortoise had won the race!

The moral of the story: Slow and steady wins the race, or pride can make you fall.

Exposition

The moment when the character(s) come face to face with the conflict. It is a turning point because the character(s) will change in some way.

Hansel and Gretel's mother was thrilled when the twins went back home to live. While they were gone, she'd spent a lot of time baking and inventing new cookie recipes. With the twins' help, she opened a bakery specializing in cookies. They called it Cookies of Fairytale County, and it quickly became the county's busiest dessert spot.

Activity 1 KEY: Snow White Plot Comparison

Snow White and her step-mother, claim that the Brothers Grimm did not tell the true story about what happened to Snow White. Compare the stories and choose the best answer to each question. Write the answer letters on the lines below.

1. According to Snow White and Marion, how did Snow White end up in the forest?

PA. Marion was jealous of Snow White's beauty, so she had a servant bring her there.

ST. Snow White went there seeking better wifi for her games.

NO. Snow ran off because Marion wouldn't allow her to play video games all day.

ME. Snow White was trying to help her friend, the princess who wears peach.

2. Which part of a plot-line best identifies the event from question #1 ?

D. falling action

L. inciting incident

G. protagonist

K. resolution

3. The conflict in the Grimm Brothers' story is...

AN. the same as in the true story; both are internal conflicts.

BE. different from the true story because the Brothers Grimm made the stepmother the protagonist.

CL. the same as the true story; both are between Snow White and the poisoned apple.

DI. different than the true story; the stepmother isn't the antagonist in the true story.

4. What do the climaxes in the stories have in common?

RF. Both happen when the apple lodges in Snow White's throat.

NO. Both include cottages in the forest.

WA. Both have happy endings.

PG. Both include seven little helpers.

5. What is the most likely reason for the Brothers Grimm changing the story?

AS. The changes make the falling action more realistic.

TH. The changes enable readers to relate to the characters.

RA. The changes make the conflict more exciting.

OF. The changes make the setting more realistic.

Exposition

KEY

The first part of the plot, when readers learn important background information about the characters and the setting.

Once upon a time, a poor haircutter lived in a tiny cottage with her twins, Hansel and Gretel. Her second husband was cruel to the kids, because they always ate all of his favorite cookies, Skinny Mints.

Every day the wicked stepfather would hide the cow so that the children had no milk to drink with their cookies. Their poor throats were parched.

Inciting Incident

KEY

The event that introduces the conflict and begins the rising action.

Finally, the stepfather demanded that their mama take the children far away. "Take them to Hollywood! They can star in a show about children who have no particular talent, like Keeping up with the Kidashians."

Conflict

KEY

The problem or struggle between two opposing forces.

Hansel and Gretel
Vs.
The Wicked Stepfather
(Person vs. Person)

Rising Action

KEY

The sequence of events that builds suspense.

Mama took them to Hollywood. She left them with a nasty, pushy producer who got them a job on Real Kids of Fairytale County. They lived in a fancy mansion with an entire pantry full of Skinny Mint cookies, but they were still homesick.

Hansel had an idea. He took a selfie in front of the pantry full of Skinny Mints and he posted the picture on Fakebook, where he knew his stepfather would see it. As expected, the very next day the wicked stepfather was at their door, demanding cookies.

Climax

KEY

The moment when the character(s) come face to face with the conflict. It is a turning point because the character(s) will change in some way.

Hansel and Gretel showed their stepfather around the house. When the wicked man saw the cookie pantry, he pushed Gretel aside, ran into the closet, and locked the door. He shouted and refused to leave, insisting that the cookies were all his.

Just then the pushy producer barged into the house asking what all the screaming was about. The wicked stepfather and pushy producer began a shouting match through the door.

Falling Action

KEY

This is when the characters are working toward resolving the conflict.

The nasty, pushy producer knew that she had struck gold, because the wicked stepfather was awful enough to make a fantastic reality star! She cancelled the twins' show and offered the man his own show, Cookie King.

When he found out he would be in charge of his own cookie factory, the wicked stepfather knew that Hollywood was where he was meant to be. He texted his wife and told her that he was sick of her and the cottage. He said he would be staying in Hollywood to be the cookie king.

Resolution

KEY

This is the outcome of the events.

Hansel and Gretel's mother was thrilled when the twins went back home to live. While they were gone, she'd spent a lot of time baking and inventing new cookie recipes. With the twins' help, she opened a bakery specializing in cookies. They called it Cookies of Fairytale County, and it quickly became the county's busiest dessert spot.

Hansel, Gretel, and Mama lived happily ever after.
